Dealing With Distraction

- Internal distractions like buying things on amazon or checking the score to last night's game can be distracting – having the discipline to box them off to a certain point in your day will help. External distractions like a colleague popping over for a quick hello might have to be dealt with by saying, "sure I can help but I'm in the middle of something important, can I come find you in 20-minutes?"
- Lastly, cognitive distortions like multitasking masquerade as productive but as it happens multitasking only feels productive as we feel like more is happening and research from Vanderbilt university shows it actually leads to a 30% delay in work completion with twice as many errors.
