

Creative Solutions & Difficult Conversations

- To harness creative thinking studies have shown that walking outdoors is an optimal environment to help this. This is due to the fact that we have new inputs as we're moving and that being outdoors reduces stress levels and elevates a sense of wellbeing. When we're stressed it narrows our focus e.g. imagine encountering a lion in broad daylight, the only thing on our mind would be to try and escape to safety ASAP, thus focus is narrow and scope for creativity is zero.
- Places like bars, café and large spaces (e.g. museum) can help improve our creative thinking as a low dose of alcohol, a sense of space and background noise can help with diffuse attention which stops us zoning in on the minutia of a problem to be solved.
